day, in speaking of Helfer, says:

said, is a native of this State. He is a thief and a soundrel. While employed some years since in Salisbury as a clerk, he robbed his employer. The fact was proved on him, and we believe he himself admitted it, and offered some lame excuse for his 'picking and stealing. He was exposed some two years ago in Congress by one of what high authority has inseriable trainer has been exposed and tranded. But, mean so he is, he is a very good abolitionist.—
Helfer stole money, and Grasley and Thursolw Weed would steal and run off slaves from their masters. Helfer turns upon the spot that gave him birth, and seeks to despect the masters and seeks to despect to make it and a seeks to despect to make it and the seeks to despect to make it is not seek to despect to make it is n stroy its material and social prosperity.— Governor Morgan aids him in his work, and hugs the traitor to his bosom. Nay, more the governor of a sovereign State, whose

A Swiss mans.—A Swiss miser died lately near Zurich who is represented to have been as fall a specimen of the class as ever existed. He was a selfmade man, a man without checation, and without any prominent talents, his principal qualities being a horrible avarice and an iron indiastry.—The proprietor of a large manufacturing establishment his great object was to extert as much work as passible. He was never married never enjoyed any of the pleasures of life, and lived, in a small low, dirty coom whose only familiare was a belstand. An adjoining room served as a kitchen, where his only servant resided and cooked his meals, which he ate standing. He never kept any regular books, and never took an inventory.—Twelve years ago his friends persuaded him to have one taken, but when long before it was finished, it showed a property free of all debts of nearly four millions of dollars, he ture up the papers and styped the proceeding. He died as he had lived, in dirt and apparent poverty; and, store to the principal difference and stope and stope and stope and stope and on the shortest notice.
